DICAPRIO FOUNDATION WOULD RETURN GIFTS IF FROM MALAYSIAN FUND

Leonardo DiCaprio's charitable foundation would return gifts or donations made to him or his ventures if they were found to have come from Malaysian wealth fund 1MDB, which is being investigated on money laundering allegations, his representatives said. In his first comment on the multinational probe into the fund, DiCaprio said he was cooperating with U.S. authorities to determine if money had come from questionable sources, according to the statement. In July a Hollywood production company was accused in a U.S. civil lawsuit of using $100 million that prosecutors said had been diverted from the 1MDB fund to finance DiCaprio's 2013 film "The Wolf of Wall Street." RISING GASOLINE, RENTS PUSH US INFLATION HIGHER IN SEPTEMBER

2 U.S. consumer prices recorded their biggest gain in five months in September as the cost of gasoline and rents surged, pointing to a steady pickup of inflation that could keep the Federal Reserve on track to raise interest rates in December. The Labor Department said on Tuesday its Consumer Price Index increased 0.3 percent last month after rising 0.2 percent in August. In the 12 months through September, the CPI accelerated 1.5 percent, the biggest year-on-year increase since October 2014. The CPI rose 1.1 percent in the year to August. "The upward creep of prices weakens any argument against a rate increase in December," said Anthony Karydakis, chief economic strategist at Miller Tabak in New York. "The economy is close to full employment and prices are starting to respond to that reality." REUTERS

RIGHTS GROUPS REQUEST US PROBE POLICE USE OF FACIAL RECOGNITION

3 Fifty civil rights groups signed a letter asking the U.S. Department of Justice to investigate police use of facial-recognition databases, arguing the technology disproportionately affects minorities and has minimal oversight. The request coincides with the release of a law school's report concluding half of America's adults have their images stored in at least one searchable facial-recognition database used by local, state and federal authorities and amid concern about law enforcement's use of force against black men. Facial-recognition databases are used by police to help identify criminal suspects. They typically work by conducting searches of vast troves of known images, such as mug shots, and algorithmically comparing them with other images, such as those taken form a store's surveillance cameras, that capture an unidentified person believed to be committing a crime. Clinton vs. Trump: What to look for in the final presidential debate

The debate is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m. ET.

GARY KANE & AMANDA MIKELBERG
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

Immigration, the Supreme Court and the economy are among the few designated talking points for the third and final presidential debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump.

However, no one expects the matchup to adhere to the format.

Viewers have watched the debates as they would a hockey game. They're interested in who's scoring points, but prefer to see the gloves come off.

The debate is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m. ET in Las Vegas.

Pundits have ranked the first two debates as the most derisive in the history of modern American politics.

Since the last debate on Oct. 9, both candidates have faced a slate of unpleasant developments:

More hacked emails

Wikileaks continued to provide Trump supporters ammunition. The Trump campaign suggested that the most recent release of Clinton's emails uncovered a quid pro quo deal between the State Department and FBI. Campaign officials argue the emails show that an FBI official offered look into the reclassification of some Clinton emails in exchange for State Department help in boosting the number of FBI agents in Iraq.

Trump accusers

Trump insists his vulgar comments about woman captured in a 2005 videotape was nothing but "locker room talk." He argued he never made unwanted sexual advances toward any women. His denials prompted several women to go public with accusations that Trump had groped, kissed or improperly touched them.

Rigged election

Trump has stepped up his claims that the presidential election is "rigged" against him. A recent Trump posting on Twitter: "Of course there is large scale voter fraud happening on and before election day."

"SNL"

Trump called for the cancelation of "Saturday Night Live" after the program ran another skit mocking his performance in the second debate. His tweet: "Watched 'Saturday Night Live' hit job on me. Time to retire the boring and unfunny show. Alec Baldwin portrayal stinks. Media rigging election!"

The last debate's unnerving side act — an emergency news conference called moments before the debate that assembled a crew of alleged Bill and Hillary Clinton abuse accusers — might be attempted again.

Trump's planted distraction this time could be the mother of man killed in the 2012 Benghazi attacks, Yahoo News reported.

Pat Smith, the mother of Sean Smith, had given a speech at the Republican National Convention blasting Clinton and holding her responsible for her son's death.

Smith confirmed to Yahoo News that she will be attending the event and might be sitting in the front row.

Trump's strategy has worked only so far as to distract from the significant the lead Clinton has opened up in a general poll (six-point lead) and in the key battleground states.

A Washington Post study gives Clinton leads of 4 to 11 percentage points in New Hampshire, Virginia, Michigan, New Mexico, Colorado, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Georgia. Winning those states would put her comfortably ahead with a total 304 electoral votes (270 needed to win the election).

Sex offenders sue DOC, claim they're unlawfully detained after release

Dozens of sex offenders who were found to be no longer sexually dangerous are suing the state Department of Correction for allegedly holding them illegally, the Boston Globe reported.

Prison officials are required by law to alert certain agencies of a sex offender's release, and the lawsuit argues that the inmates were detained at the DOC-run Massachusetts Treatment Center in Bridgewater for a day or more, which violates state law.

The DOC is violating state law by holding inmates while they alert the proper agencies of their release, the lawsuit alleges. JOE GRATZ/FLICKR

"The DOC is basically taking individuals who are as free as you or I, and confining them in state prison—with all the degradations that entails—while they fax alerts and address notifications," Michael Tumposky, one of the lawyers for the inmates, said in a news release.

The plaintiffs seek $5 million in damages. NIKKI M. MASCALI

Michael Bloomberg gifts Museum of Science $50 million

"This museum really changed the course of my life," Bloomberg, a Medford native, said.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
letters@metro.us

As a kid growing up in Medford, Michael Bloomberg would spend his Saturdays at the Museum of Science. From when he was just 8 years old, Bloomberg, 74, would take a bus from West Medford to Sullivan Square and then a train to Lechmere in order to get to the museum.

"I looked forward to that trip all week long," he said.

Standing in front of the museum on Tuesday, Bloomberg said that he "never in a million years" would have thought he'd be back here to name a part of the museum after his parents. Thanks to his $50 million donation, the Museum of Science has renamed its Education Division as the William and Charlotte Bloomberg Science Education Center.

The Museum of Science and Bloomberg Philanthropies, founded by the entrepreneur and three-term New York City mayor, announced the donation with a ceremony to unveil the new signage on the front of the museum building.

The donation is the largest in the museum's 186-year history, but it's not Bloomberg's first contribution to what he has called his "first teacher."

Bloomberg has donated to the museum three previous times: One donation supported the 2011 renovation of the Charles Hayden Planetarium; the second supported access and internship programs; and the third, a planning grant, enabled the Museum to redesign exhibition and programming spaces.

"This museum really changed the course of my life," Bloomberg said. "Everyone remembers the first teacher to have an impact on their ways of thinking and understanding the world, and for me that teacher really was the Boston Museum of Science."

Bloomberg has donated to other local institutions as well, showing that he never forgot his hometown. He helped fund the Mother's Walk on the Rose Kennedy Greenway and gave $32 million to Harvard—where he attended business school—to help fund an executive education program for municipal leaders.

This recent gift will support the creation of new computer science and food science initiatives and continue to bolster the current education engineering and STEM programs. To Bloomberg, it's about showing that STEM education in America is worth funding.

"We live in the most wonderful country in the world, we just have to make sure that all of the kids who live in this country have the opportunities that I did," Bloomberg said.

CELEBRATE COOPERATION

OCTOBER IS CO-OP MONTH

are owned and controlled by the people who use them or work in them. Profits are returned to the co-op members, not funneled to those at the top of a corporate structure.

No wonder one billion people worldwide have joined a co-op!

You may not realize it, but cooperatives are all around. These are businesses owned by consumers, producers, farmers, workers, and more. Co-ops are focused on member and worker benefits rather than just on profits. Local control and ownership means that jobs and money from the co-op stay in the community. Schilling said he's ready to run against Warren — if his wife approves

The former Red Sox ace has mused about running before, but 2018 may be his year.

Former Red Sox pitcher Curt Schilling says he's "made [his] decision" about whether or not to run for Sen. Elizabeth Warren's seat: He's in.

He just needs to clear it with his wife first.

The World Series champion made the remarks during a radio interview that was transcribed by WPRI reporter Ted Nesi.

"So I've made my decision. I'm going to run," Schilling said. "But, but I haven't talked to Shonda, my wife. And ultimately it's going to come down to how her and I feel this would affect our marriage and our kids."

Schilling appeared on WPRO's John DePetro program and fielded call-in questions from Rhode Islanders for the first time about the collapse of his video-game company, 38 Studios. The firm's bankruptcy after two years of operation left taxpayers with a bill of about $90 million.

Shonda Schilling later called in to the radio station, but said she still hadn't decided whether her husband should run.

If he does run, he may have an uphill battle: A WBUR poll last month found Massachusetts voters favored Warren over Schilling 54 percent to 29 percent, respectively, in a hypothetical matchup.

Styrofoam ban to take effect in Cambridge

An empty Styrofoam coffee cup lying on the ground ISTOCK

Cambridge will join Somerville, Brookline and other Bay State municipalities in banning certain kinds of Styrofoam containers on Thursday when the city's new law to prohibit them takes effect.

The law prohibits businesses from serving food or drinks in single-use, disposable polystyrene containers,the Associated Press reported.

Foam containers can still be used to package raw meat, fish or eggs, but city officials are urging businesses to use reusable or recyclable containers for prepared food and drink.

City council approved the ban last year, citing environmental concerns. Scientists aren't sure exactly how long the product takes to biodegrade, but some estimates put it as high as a few centuries or more.

Each year, Americans throw away 25 billion Styrofoam cups, enough to circle the Earth 436 times, according to Harper's Index.

As for Dunkin' Donuts: The coffee chain already developed a replacement for its iconic styrofoam cups when Brookline adopted its ban in 2014, made of paper with a double-walled design.

White House seeks to answer complaints of aggrieved air travelers

The effort is aimed at responding to complaints from consumers that range from delayed or damaged baggage and wheelchairs to pricey add-ons like payments for seat assignments.

The White House announced efforts on Tuesday to improve air travel for Americans by requiring airlines to refund baggage handling fees if luggage is delayed and requiring online travel agents to provide neutral search results.

The effort is aimed at responding to complaints from consumers that range from delayed or damaged baggage and wheelchairs to pricey add-ons like payments for seat assignments.

"The actions we're announcing today will help consumers know how airlines are performing, will make sure that consumers don't have to pay for services they don't receive and will help consumers find the best flight options for them," Jason Furman, chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers told reporters.

As part of that effort, the Transportation Department issued an advanced notice of proposed rulemaking which would require airlines to refund baggage fees if luggage is "substantially delayed." The department did not define a substantial delay.

The Transportation Department also released new final rules that would require airlines and online ticket agents to ensure that their search results are neutral, without favoring certain airlines.

The new final rules would also require big U.S. airlines to report how often they lose or damage wheelchairs. They also changed the methodology for counting mishandled bags to compare lost, stolen, damaged or delayed bags against the total number of bags handled to make it more accurate, the White House said.

Tobey Maguire and Jennifer Meyer split

Let's officially declare this the year that love died.

Tobey Maguire and Jennifer Meyer are calling it quits after nine years of marriage. The "Great Gatsby" actor and celeb jewelry designer met and began dating in 2003 and wed four years later — a classy, tried-and-true courtship by Hollywood standards, if we do say so ourselves. Maguire and Meyer have two children together, 9-year-old Ruby and 7-year-old Otis. But we guess the saying is true: Nothing lasts forever.

The couple released a joint statement to People, which broke the news of their separation, "After much soul-searching and consideration, we have made the decision to separate as a couple. As devoted parents, our first priority remains raising our children together with enduring love, respect and friendship." First Brangelina, and now this. Is there any hope for love?

Kerry Washington welcomes baby No. 2!

Kerry Washington has obviously learned a thing or two from playing the notorious public relations fixer Olivia Pope on ABC's "Scandal." The actress gave birth to her second child, Caleb Kelechi Asomugha, over two weeks ago without a peep to the media. E! News reports that the 39-year-old and her husband, former NFL player Nnamdi Asomugha, welcomed their new addition Oct. 5.

This isn't the first time Washington has pulled a fast one on us. When she gave birth to her daughter, Isabelle, in 2014, she kept the news of the birth a secret for 11 days! When it comes to this privacy thing: It's handled.

Is Kim K back?

All is not lost for Kim K fans wondering what's in store for their favorite celebrity after her Paris robbery. The reality star, known for a constant stream of updates on her app, website and social media channels, has gone radio silent as she attempts to recover from the traumatic ordeal during Paris' fashion week. With many, including her sister, implying that a huge step back from the spotlight was in order for her, fans have had to get used to the idea of seeing a lot less of Kim.

But her assistant, Steph Shep, got the green light to let fans know, via Kim's website and personal app, that she and some of Kim's closest friends and family would keep the exclusive updates coming.

We suspect that those famous pouty lips and contoured cheekbones will be making a comeback quicker than you can say "selfie."

Lea DeLaria of 'OITNB' slams Trump supporters

Trump supporters who decided to crash a Hillary Clinton event in New York on Monday were in for a rude awakening. Lea DeLaria, who plays inmate Carrie Black or "Big Boo" on Netflix's "Orange is the New Black," had some choice words and multiple birds to flip at the angry protesters. As one female Trump supporter attempted to match DeLaria's enthusiasm, she was quickly shut down with insults about her unkempt hair and suggestions about her sexuality based on the shirt she was wearing.

The 58-year-old comedian appeared to enjoy her verbal sparring and even rallied the crowd into chanting "F-ck Trump!" The incident was surprisingly reflective of DeLaria's famously crass character on "OITNB."

Did it start last year with a cover of Britney Spears' "Toxic" and her Broadway debut as Roxie Hart in "Chicago"? Or did it begin two years ago with a weekly residency, singing at The Sayers Club in Hollywood? According to Rumer Willis, who has done all those things and more, she started singing about 28 years ago.

"Goodness," Willis sighs from her Los Angeles home. "I feel like I've been singing since I came out of the womb. It's just always been there. It's just something I always did." It's five days before her first national tour begins, and there's no sign of nerves about stepping further into the world of being a singer.

"I'm more excited than nervous," Bruce Willis and Demi Moore's oldest daughter says calmly. "I'm excited about coming to all the different cities and getting to meet all the people who come to the shows. It's an interesting job I have," she adds. "I'm lucky being able to do both acting and singing at the same time."

Of course, she also dances, and won Season 20 of "Dancing with the Stars." Amid all this, she's managed to set aside time to begin recording her debut album with lauded music vet, producer Linda Perry.

"It's still too early on in the process to tell how it will turn out," Willis says. "It's not even close to being done, but I would hope it comes out sometime in 2017."

Along with playing covers — mostly jazz and pop standards — Willis will mix in some of her own songs into her set on what she's calling her Over the Love Tour. But only those that fit her theme.

"I wanted the songs that felt like they spoke to the story that I wanted to tell. I want to tell a story of something that everybody struggles with and one that is not prejudiced, and doesn't depend on where you work or where you live — and that story is love. We all experience it," she says. "We've all been broken-hearted and then there is the other side of that. There are two sides of the coin that make up this story I want to tell."

Being the storyteller means standing center stage, fronting her three-piece band. But Willis has handled the spotlight for some, well, 28 years.

"You can try and fight or hide away and you get nowhere," she says of paparazzi glare. "You can't have complete control over your life, but you can choose how much you let it effect you."

Sister act

Joseph's Natalie Closner on James Bay, "White Flag" and the intrigue of a family band.

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

Joseph's haunting, melodic folk harmonies and time-traveling narrative lyrics have garnered them mainstream appeal. The sister trio — Natalie, Allison and Meegan Closner from Portland, Oregon — rose to the top of the Billboard Adult Alternative chart with "White Flag" just last week and kicked off their fall headlining tour in early September. Next week, they'll perform on "The Late Show with Steven Colbert."

"I keep having these pinch-myself moments," says Natalie, the eldest of the three. (Allison and Meegan are twins.) "We've had several moments that felt like 'arrivals,' and all of those moments are heart-swelling, but it's like that old saying, 'It takes three years to be an overnight success.'"

For Joseph, these moments follow their second studio album, "I'm Alone, No You're Not," which also snagged the top spot on Billboard's Heatseekers chart in September. En route to St. Louis, Natalie calls in for a quick chat about being a sister act, their inspiration for "White Flag" and how they really feel about "Portlandia."

How is being on the road with James Bay?

He's so, so good and I have no doubt saying, that man is going to be a legend some day. I'm on this tour thinking, "Oh, there's going to be a documentary about this person in 30 years, and I'm going to have to figure out what to say about it."

Do you find there are comparisons of you guys with other West Coast family or sister acts — like Haim?

Of course, and there are some really amazing three-sister bands out there so I feel super honored. People are just going to naturally compare you to these types of things. It's just a unique thing to do, to be a family and doing this. I understand the curiosity because families are weird and people are like, "How do you do that?"

How do you do that?

I would be curious to read interviews with other family bands, but for us, it's amazing. When we're 80 years old, well be able to look back and be like, "Remember that time in Wyoming?"

You still have conflict because you're dealing with the people you've known from when you were 2-years-old and those things from when you were 2-years-old still get brought up. You have to face those dynamics of your family head-on. For me, I have the dominating older sister, center of attention dynamic. And for someone else, it's "Oh, I have to fall into my role as the younger sibling, doing whatever I'm told to do." I have to consciously say, "How do I empower you to break through this thing you knew about yourself growing up?"

Does Portland ever show itself in your music?

I think wherever you're from is going to have a big influence on the art that you make. I think it's the [Portland] landscape. It's very moody with gray skies and foggy evergreen mountains. We spent a lot of time camping and being outdoors. I hope that adds some groundedness to the art we make.

Are you a Portland resident who is horrified by "Portlandia"?

I don't mind going on the record and saying, everything that is on that show is true. It's just a little bit exaggerated, but it's absurd and wonderful.

Pottery Barns taps renowned Indian designer Sabyasachi Mukherjee for new collection.

TINA CHADHA
@TinaatMetro
tina.chadha@metro.us

Pottery Barn has been killing it with its recent designer collaborations — we're still obsessed with our Emily & Meritt gold polka dot sheets — but this time the home-furnishings brand knocked it out of the park. For its first global collaboration, Pottery Barn teamed up with one of India's biggest fashion designers, Sabyasachi Mukherjee, to bring his bohemian spirit to home decor.

A Bollywood favorite, Mukherjee is known for gorgeous creations that blend traditional techniques with modern romance: bold florals, gold embellishments, rich fabrics and intricate embroidery are his signatures.

But anyone who's been to one of the designer's exceptionally curated, gallerylike boutiques, where the walls are lined with vintage portraits and antique plates, knows his aesthetic translates perfectly off the racks, too.

The Pottery Barn designers witnessed this firsthand last June when they randomly strolled into the Sabyasachi flagship in Mumbai while on a sourcing a trip to India.

"We have never spent that amount of time in one store ever in any of our trips," said Monica Bhargava, executive vice president of Pottery Barn, during a dinner in NYC celebrating the launch.

"It was such a transformative experience. That magic that Sabyasachi has created is breathtaking. The nine of us couldn't stop photographing every wall."

That magic, of course, led to the collaboration launching today at potterybarn.com and in stores Nov. 1. The Sabyasachi for Pottery Barn holiday collection includes more than 50 pieces, such as floral plates, brocade and embroidered pillows, block-printed reversible quilts and tufted rugs that range in prices $14.50-$1,799.

A cool $20M

A Beacon Hill mansion hit the market.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Why, yes, this is a Beacon Street mansion up for grabs. MAGGIE COLLINS

Beacon Hill has long been one of the most historic and luxurious neighborhoods in Boston. In fact, the 18th century architect Charles Bulfinch — who designed the Massachusetts State House — originally planned for landscape of the area to focus heavily on freestanding mansions, according to the city of Boston.

Those mansions were originally intended to stand on large plots of land around a public square. While Bulfinch wasn't able to focus solely on mansions — the prevailing architecture of the neighborhood includes row homes and pairs of houses that are symmetrical in design — a few of these historic Beacon Hill mansions are still standing, and one of those is 40 Beacon St.

This expansive building is on the market as a single-family home. One of Boston's largest and oldest Beacon Hill mansions, 40 Beacon St. includes 13 bedrooms and 13 bathrooms in its more than 20,000 square feet of space.

The existing configuration of this home features three separate areas as designed by famed Boston architect Alexander Parris. First is a main house that has a grand access off of Beacon Street, a living room, a master bedroom plus six guest bedrooms, a sitting room overlooking Boston Common and a 1,300-square-foot roof deck.

"The Link" is next, and encompasses the kitchen, family room, two bedrooms and a garden terrace. The first floor of this area even includes a "turn-of-the-century ballroom" with a service kitchen and elevators to the floors above.

After that comes the "Carriage House," which you enter through a gated driveway. Here, you'll find four more bedrooms, a dance studio, home gym, three-car garage, wine cellar and storage all in five floors of space.

The expansive home is on the market for $20 million. Though it is set up as a single-family home now, it can possible be sold as four or five units. Proposed redevelopments to turn this one mansion into a multi-unit building can be seen here and would include expanding the home with 1,844 additional square feet as well as adding underground parking for nine vehicles in the existing basement.

NOW IS THE TIME TO WIN THE WAIVER WIRE

OPINION

Bill Dubiel is a fantasy football expert for Rotoballer.com.

The Colts' Jack Doyle is a smart pick-up at tight end. GETTY IMAGES

Now is the time to make an impact on the waiver wire. Snagging players now can make your season down the road. Be sure to check out Rotoballer.com's Fantasy Football Waiver Wire Tool for up-to-the-hour waiver wire advice and ideas, and to follow me @Roto_Dubs for quick-hitting news and analysis.

Keenum and Kenny Primed For Giant Fantasy Day

While many would laugh at the idea, there is actually some fantasy value to be found in the Los Angeles Rams passing game. Veteran wide receiver Kenny Britt has been downright usable in all formats in almost every game this season. He has at least four catches in every game this season, is on pace for over 1,300 receiving yards, and is coming off a huge two-touchdown game in which his quarterback (Case Keenum) looked terrific. Britt is now an every-week WR3 and can be rostered in all formats for depth.

Get Jacked Up For Doyle in Week 7

Indianapolis Colts tight end Jack Doyle should be in for a huge week with fellow tight end Dwayne Allen likely out with an ankle injury. Allen left early in the Colts' Week 6 matchup, leaving Doyle as the primary tight end, and he didn't disappoint—he posted 53 yards and a touchdown on four catches. While he's been hit-or-miss in 2016, with Allen out there is a ton of upside for Doyle, as he should be an integral part of the Indianapolis attack against Tennessee.

Robinson Stranded in Lackluster Jacksonville Offense

While Allen Robinson is, without a doubt, one of the best deep-ball receivers in the NFL, his lack of volume in 2016 has many fantasy owners worried. He hasn't yet posted a game with more than 72 receiving yards, and has had no more than seven catches in any single game. Robinson has found the end zone thrice, but when he hasn't scored a touchdown he's been a severely disappointing fantasy asset. It's fair to blame the dynamic wide out's woes on Jacksonville quarterback Blake Bortles, who has struggled in the early goings with nine turnovers in just five games.

NFL Sleepers of the Week

Each week we will identify three players worth taking a shot on in deeper leagues.

Bilal Powell, RB, New York Jets – It's been trending that way for weeks, and now it finally happened—Bilal Powell actually outsnapped Matt Forte on Monday night. This is a full-on timeshare, and it looks like Powell is the back to own in fantasy.

Jamison Crowder, WR, Washington Redskins – Crowder now has a touchdown in four of the Redskins' six games, and he should continue to produce as a flex option as long as Jordan Reed is sidelined.

Charles Clay, TE, Buffalo Bills – Clay has five catches in each of the Bills' last three games, and while he hasn't found the end zone he has a very good chance in a tilt against his former team, the Dolphins, in Week 7.

NFL power rankings | by Luke Miller

No. 1

Vikings (5-0)

Rested from the bye, the Vikings get to head to Philadelphia in Week 7 for the NFL's first taste of Sam Bradford versus Carson Wentz. Bradford's old home will be their toughest road test yet.

No. 2

Patriots (5-1)

Two games, 782 yards, six touchdowns and a 135.5 QB rating. Sorry haters, but Tom Brady is still on pace for 4,692 yards and 36 TDs this season. And he hasn't turned it over yet either.

No. 3

Seahawks (4-1)

Russell Wilson's astounding 20th career fourth quarter/OT comeback came just five games into his fifth NFL season. Then consider the fact that he's doing it without his legs (7 yards on six carries).

No. 4

Falcons (4-2)

They didn't get the win in Seattle, but they keep answering questions. They didn't stick with the run game like in Denver, but three Matt Ryan TD passes in the third quarter got the Falcons back in it.

No. 5

Cowboys (5-1)

Heading into their bye, we're finally ready to give the Cowboys the respect they deserve. Hammering Cincy at home and hammering Green Bay at Lambeau just takes it a step further than picking on the Niners.

No. 6

Bills (4-2)

LeSean McCoy had his best game of the season against the coach who decided he was superfluous, and is averaging 118 rushing yards per game during the Bills' four game win streak.

No. 7

Steelers (4-2)

They lost Big Ben and laid their second egg of the season in Miami. It might be harder for them to go on the redemption tour of terror than it was after losing to the Eagles: The Pats are in Pittsburgh this week.

No. 8

Broncos (4-2)

After Atlanta showed the world the Broncos defense was mortal in Week 5, they actually did one of the best jobs this season against Philip Rivers and the Chargers despite a Week 6 loss.

No. 9

Chiefs (3-2)

The defense wanted redemption for its performance in Pittsburgh, and one can only imagine their bye week: running Dontari Poe screen passes, because why would you want to imagine anything else?

No. 10

Redskins (4-2)

Not much went wrong for Washington against Philadelphia. Their dregs-of-the-league run defense shut Philadelphia down (as did their pass defense) and Matt Jones had 135 yards on the ground.

Best of the rest

11 — Raiders (4-2)
12 — Cardinals (3-3)
13 — Texans (4-2)
14 — Eagles (3-2)
15 — Packers (3-2)
16 — Lions (3-3)
17 — Giants (3-3)
18 — Bengals (2-4)
19 — Chargers (2-4)
20 — Saints (2-3)

Virgo Don't give in to unreasonable demands. Take care of your responsibilities before tackling someone else's. Network and participate in work-related events.

Libra Check out an opportunity that can lead to extra income, but don't sign up for something that doesn't have anything in it for you. Focus on equality.

Scorpio Keep an open mind, but don't be too willing to share what you discover or think. Listen attentively and act accordingly. Secure your home and personal effects.
